Making Your Voice Heard

Essential Question: How can we effectively express ourselves in different situations?

Text 1
"My Wonder Horse"
The narrator dreams of capturing the Wonder Horse, one day finally achieving this goal, but eventually the horse escapes. Throughout this journey, the narrator expresses various emotions verbally and non-verbally.

Text 2
"Wild Animals Aren’t Pets” and “Let People Own Exotic Animals”
Both texts address the opposing sides of the issue of owning exotic animals. Each text uses persuasive techniques to express the claim it is supporting.

Text 3
"Eleven"
When faced with conflict, Rachel struggles to express her thoughts and feelings to her teacher and classmates. As a result, she suffers internally feeling sadness on her birthday.

Text 4
"A Voice"
Although she was discouraged from speaking English at home, the narrator’s mother found her own voice over time, and inspired the narrator to do the same.

Text 5
"Words Like Freedom"
The narrator uses specific word choices to express his/her thoughts about living through different situations.

Connections:
- Both texts focus on the emotions of characters and how expressing oneself can be both verbal and non-verbal.
- Through word choice, both texts poetically describe characters that have lived through different experiences that affected their views on life.
- Both texts discuss expressing thoughts and opinions. However, in the first text readers must infer the narrator’s emotions based on his actions, while in Text 2, the opinions and emotions are explicit.
